LONG LIVE THE KING

The cable which carried the news of the death of King George VI. announced the succession of the Prince of Wales, to be known hereafter as Edward VIII.

Kings die, but the monarchy is continuous. The title passes automatically to the state lives on the death of a holder. The state lives on, and there is no interval during which it has no head. There is no such thing as a vacuum, but they are only in confirmation of the change of rulers that has already taken place.

Hence, "The King is dead; long live the King." The same words which announce the passing of one monarch proclaim the person and authority of his successor. In the same breath we farewell the one and hail the other.

AFTER FORTY-FIVE YEARS

Mr. G. R. P. Kirkpatrick is retiring, after forty-five years spent as manager of the Imperial Bank at Edmonton.

To spend forty-five years in one position, any position, is a remarkable achievement. To manage any sort of a business concern for so long a time is still more rare. To have managed a branch of a chartered bank continuously for that length of time is surely a record.

Edmonton, it has to be admitted, can no longer claim to be a young city. It is fast becoming the first city in western Canada where there has been a private bank here before that. Time marches on.

The thousands of people who have done business with his bank ever since long ago, the retirement of Mr. Kirkpatrick will seem like the closing of an era. They will hope he may long continue to enjoy health, well-earned rest, and residence in a city in whose building and expansion he has played a distinguished part here before that. Time marches on.

THE PRICE OF DELAY

Premier Abernethy has got a shock when he took office to find the treasury was absolutely empty, with "holes" scattered in the bottom of that imaginary receptacle.

If he had been reading the "rubbish" newspapers he would have known he wouldn't find much there.

Mr. Magor has passed the shock along to the bond-holders and bond-lenders, without making any attempt to soften the impact.

It will get to the taxpayers when the legislature meets and the reports come down, along with plans for more "concessions" and perhaps more taxes.

They will recall then that Mr. Howson and his associates a couple of years ago urged the Government of that day to do what Mr. Magor is doing now—appeal to the bond-holders to reduce the bond-interest rates.

Had that been done, the present Government would have less to worry about and the taxpayers less to apprehend in the way of further "emergency" economies and excises.

Procrastination is the thief of money, as well as of time. It is not cost Alberta taxpayers the money which two years ago reduced interest rates would have saved, probably four to five millions of dollars.

A REVIEVE

Publishers of Alberta's weekly newspapers, gathered in Edmonton last week, accomplished one thing of definite and first rate importance to themselves and their readers.

They persuaded the Dominion Government to lift the ban on liquor advertising for three months; thereby averting an immediate slump in revenue which would have meant more money to them in the difference between breaking even and losing money, for some perhaps the difference between staying in business and being driven out of it.

Newspapers are sold at less than the cost of producing them. That is only possible if they can get enough extra money to make up the difference between what it costs to deliver the printed paper to the subscriber and what it pays for it, plus a living margin for the owner.

If the advertising patronage of newspapers is to be restricted by prohibitions and "codes," one of two things must happen. The advertiser will have to pay more for his paper. Or the papers will pass out of existence.

THE ONE SAFE GUARD

Perhaps a bit excited over the hold-up and murder of the previous day, a Vancouver banker suggested: "The time might come when Canadian banks would have to follow the lead of bankers in the United States and station their own uniformed and armed guards in their branches."

The bank might, or might not, be able to prevent their employees being killed and their money stolen in that way. But others could be so much more sure to follow the lead of bankers in the United States and station their own uniformed and armed guards in their branches.

Yet in the conditions the nervous banker forces to be possible, guards would be needed in these places as well as in the banks. Bandits do not care who or where they rob. They only prefer banks because that is where money is to be found in the largest quantities. Put guards in banks only, and they would be out of their stealing and killing elsewhere.

So far as the public are concerned, there is no substitute for a sufficient and efficient public police force. Not even more or less of business could afford to maintain a private armed guard. Whatever it costs, police efficiency is always cheap at the price.

The Fillets of The Edmonton Bulletin

That the present administration is capable of every device to keep the country united by the late repudiation of henet debts contracted during the outbreak of last spring. But a lower debt has been reached or at least is proposed to be reached. There appears to be every intention not to allow the local volunteer corps the land grant which has so justly been given to King George VI.

... If every act of this administration since rebellion has not been of such a nature as to so much interest and maintain such outbursts of the rebellious, to alienate the sympathy of a majority of the total inhabitants of the territories, would some kindly mention what act it was.

Poems That Live

TRUTH •
Truth is the fruit of itself,
And needs no other touch;
And purer than the purest gold,
Refine it wiser so much.

It is the life and light of love,
The sun that ever shines,
And spirit of that special grace,
That faith and love define.

It is the warrant of the word,
That yields a scent so sweet,
As given to power to tread
All falsehood under foot.

—Ben Jonson.

The Passing Show

By J. S. COWPER
Amid the genuine sorrows of his people, King George the Fifth is to be laid away with royal ceremonial. The hearts and hopes of the British will turn to their new king, Edward the Eighth.

No heir has come to the throne of England holding more widespread popularity and affection than has the new monarch. For nearly twenty years he has been recognized abroad as Britain's first ambassador of good-will. At home he has endeared himself to the masses by his interest in popular sports and his ready affability; more deeply he has touched them by his readiness to endure the hardship of the trenches and by personal visitations to the areas stricken by strikes and disasters.

In Canada he has been welcomed as a Canadian by choice, and in Alberta as a brother-rancher whose showings of live stock have won championship and national honors. He has made no secret of the fact that his happiest hours have been when he could exchange the ceremonial life of the courts for the freedom of life in the range in our own western lands.

No portion of the Empire but he has visited and made hosts of personal friends; no place in the world has he grasped the life and problems of its people. Beneath all his love of sport and good fellowship he showed a serious appreciation of the duties of the crown to the Throne. No British king has had better preparation for his task or enters on his kingly career more securely surrounded by the loyalty and affection of his people and the goodwill of the nations.

"The King is dead; long live the king!"

I was an eyewitness of a very pleasing and illuminative episode in the career of Edward on his visit to Canada as Prince of Wales in 1919. No other newspaperman was present, and I was interested to note the reactions of the people.

It happened at Vancouver. The civic celebrations culminated with a ball at the Vancouver hotel. I was not "among those present."

I merely happened to be in the rotunda meeting a couple of acquaintances from Alaska. We were interested in the news of the Prince's coming to see the Prince. The lady from Alaska, as I recall, seemed a little sniffy at the people who dashed through the rotunda to get a view of the Prince.

At midnight, following the usual custom, four aged, wizened charwomen made their appearance with mop and bucket to handle the marble floor of the rotunda. Before they were well away through their task the manager hustled them aside and a doorman came knocking in.

Word had come that the Prince was about to see the Prince. The lady from Alaska, as I recall, seemed a little sniffy at the people who dashed through the rotunda to get a view of the Prince.

High Blood Pressure

By DOCTOR FRANK MCCOY
By the blood pressure is meant the degree of tension maintained within the walls of the arteries. The patient is said to have high blood pressure or hypertension when the tension is raised above 140. I consider the blood pressure is within normal limits when it ranges between 120 and 130 and a blood pressure of 140 must be considered evidence of high blood pressure. By the systolic pressure is meant the tension occurring during the beat of the heart, and the diastolic pressure refers to the pressure occurring in between the heart beats.

High blood pressure is dangerous to health, and for this reason, the large insurance companies reject the applicant whose blood pressure is abnormally high. As a general rule, high blood pressure occurs with middle age and is one of the disorders of those past 40.

In order to guard against a dangerously high blood pressure, it is a good plan for a middle-aged patient to have the blood pressure tested every 6 months or every year, as in this way the elevation of the pressure will be discovered before it has caused very high.

It is well known that those living the civilized life of today are prone to high blood pressure. Hypertension is most often detected in those patients of a stocky build who appear to have a great deal of vitality and who do not suspect they are in danger of arterial disease. Inasmuch as these patients are frequently of the type successful in business, it has been thought that high blood pressure is a disease of the "pressure" type.

Emotions of various types, whether excitement, fear, anxiety or worry, play a decided part in raising the blood pressure. At first, the rise is temporary, but if the pressure continues to rise, it becomes a permanent condition. Inasmuch as these patients are chronic worriers and the tendency to worry indicates a lack of emotional stability, it is not surprising that the blood pressure is in a very marked degree.

Although Bright's disease or Nephritis is commonly found in the patient with arterial hypertension, high blood pressure does not independently and the kidneys are perfectly healthy. In studying the causes of high blood pressure, I believe that the most important single cause is diet. These patients are usually great starch eaters. As a general rule, they have been blessed with good digestion and are able to handle a large amount of food without any discomfort. This leads them to indulge their liking for starches without immediate thought of the effect on the blood pressure.

The overuse of seasonings and spices may also be considered contributing causes. The patient with high blood pressure, that meat, contrary to the popular idea on the subject, is not harmful and it is my belief that meat has little or no effect in causing the blood pressure to rise.

It is the patient's habit of eating meat plain to the patient that he can go on and enjoy meat with his meals and that this will not cause a rise in the blood pressure. It is a reasonable amount of meat has a definite place in the diet of the patient with this disorder.

ANSWER: The number of meals which may be taken to advantage is an individual problem. Those with good digestion often seem to eat six or seven small meals a day. They are correctly balanced to provide all of the substances necessary to health. The average person appears to benefit from sticking to the three-meal plan. In the case of certain patients, the nervous person will feel better when eating three meals than when eating two. In the case of others, the nervous person will feel better when eating two meals than when eating three.

QUESTION: Mrs. W. D. writes: "How many meals a day are best? One of my friends rarely eats two meals, skipping breakfast, while I myself eat four meals a day, and I am a cancer patient. Another friend eats four small meals with benefit."

Education Will Be Basis Co-operative Social Life, Says Miss Crawford

EDUCATION falls in its obligations toward society, it is because of the false education which is being imparted in her address at the afternoon session of the United Farm Women of Alberta conference on Tuesday, Miss Crawford gave an instructive account of the subject of "Education" as follows up to the report of Mrs. Winifred Ross of Millet, on the work done by the U.F.W.A. in co-operative education.

Miss Crawford's education was based upon the philosophical side of the education, and tracing the transition of social and economic life from these times of a good living from the land, also, she pointed out the necessity of changing educational methods to cope with social problems.

"The index of the time point to the co-operative life of social life," Miss Crawford pointed out, and education must change to teach this idea. It is only in the system of co-operative living in society that the people are treated fairly, this education must be away from the cultivation of individualism.

CHILDREN LEARN TO DO THINGS BY DOING. In the present plan in the public schools of Alberta, the child from kindergarten to six is given to do things which teach him to be a citizen and a worker. Reading, writing and mathematics are taught in the new system by being done.

"In 19th century education in Alberta the new curriculum was introduced, and in the Normal Practical School in Edmonton, it is given to be an innovation which has been the child's education through the fact that he is putting into use the ideas surrounding actual teaching."

Miss Crawford described a recent visit by the Normal Practical School in Edmonton to see the children at work. Grad 2 was playing house. Everything in the room was a lesson. Each child had a part to complete, and the work was made out by the committee.

"A child in the Normal Practical School is not a child in the ordinary sense. He is a child in the sense that he is learning to do things by doing. He is a child in the sense that he is learning to do things by doing. He is a child in the sense that he is learning to do things by doing."

Children learn to work each for all and all for each. The traits of co-operation which are being inculcated. It develops a technical sense of thinking, and a later life becomes that flexible quality of mind needed to enable them to keep pace with the changes of modern social living. It inculcates a spirit of co-operation which is that is spontaneously of thought which will embrace all people at all times.

At present the new system of education is in operation in order to see to it that this has been accomplished by Dr. Donald Dickie, of Edmonton. Miss Olive Fisher and Mrs. Hay of Calgary.

OBSTACLES IN THE WAY. Miss Crawford touched briefly upon the obstacles facing the progress of broader educational progress as chiefly economic. Space and accommodation are needed, and more teachers trained to do the work.

On a cryptic note she concluded her address with reference to the building up of armaments rather than of peace, and the education, broadened to cope with such problems.

Mrs. Winifred Ross' report as convener of education in the U.F.W.A. provided a splendid background for Miss Crawford's address, indicating as it did the interest and active measures taken by the organization to promulgate the adoption of the new curriculum, and to establish a larger administrative staff.

In the new course adopted by 75 rural schools, the 12-year school term is divided into sections. Grades one to six are in the first section, with three years intermediate grades to follow and then a two-year high school. Progress is marked every six months rather than yearly, and qualifying examinations are based on the unit system.

Dr. Donald Dickie, who was unable to be present at the meeting has been invited to address a later session.

Mrs. Price occupied the chair, and following her address comments were appointed for resolutions, credentials, order of business and reception.

P. J. Malloy of Warner in presenting the report of the activities of the executive, announced the membership in the organization

Money Alone Will Not Always Pay For Favors

DEAR MISS DIX—I am a boy of 18, living with a young couple who took me in when my mother told me to "get out from home. They have been like father and mother to me and have let me live with them for 11 months without paying any board, as I could not get any work. Now I have a job and I feel that I should pay them a little, although my job is not permanent and I will be able to pay after it is through. I have often thought that I was a burden on them and wanted to leave, but they would not be able to repay, but I will be able to pay them more than I will ever be able to repay. In any way, I owe them some way that I can make some return for all their kindness to me. They are for me and my family both.

Answer: A letter like yours renders one's life in human nature. For it is a true proof of friendship that opens the door to a handsome boy and takes him in. Comfort and success him. Here is a boy who has gratitude and appreciation of the favors that have been bestowed upon him, and who wishes to repay them instead of just taking them for granted, as so many of his age. Fine people, all three of you.

You are right in saying that you will never be able to repay this man and woman who have done so much for you. A debt of this kind cannot be liquidated by money, because they have not only saved you from bodily want but from soul starvation.

What New York Is Wearing

By Helen Williams

For this calamity your kind friends have saved you. They have given you a home and a decent living. They have surrounded you with love and affection and have kept up your morale. For that you have to thank them far more than for keeping you from starvation.

For this neither want nor expect to be paid in money. But this obligation on you to repay them in affection and consideration and in being the kind of a man they want you to be. After what they have done for you, you can't let them down by turning quitter or renegade, or by becoming a cheap sport or a lousy crook.

You show the right spirit in wanting to pay back in money also something of what has been spent on you. That is a debt of honor, and which you must pay. No man can respect himself or be respected by others unless he owes somebody else support. The male parasite is the lowest of all created things. You've got to be able to stand on your own feet and look the world in the eye and tell him where to go in order to be a real man.

So keep pegging along at your job. DOROTHY DIX.

Flapper Fanny Says

By Gladys Parker

After having a dinner and bridge at home and I wish you would tell me just how to set up the bridge table after dinner without the usual confusion. I live in an apartment and there is not space enough to have the tables set up and ready before the guests arrive.

Another matter that gives me much concern is just how I can place my guests. They all play a good game of bridge, but four of them are not especially good players. How can I arrange to place them in a way that I can win?

Answer:—Mrs. V. M. H. I am sure you will be able to entertain without confusion and place your guests in a way that will be to your advantage. It is as simple as pie.

Design for Nonchalance

Not so long ago a well-known New York publisher who composed the most delightful of fragrances, gave a cocktail party for the members of the press. It was a party of the most unusual run of cocktail parties, ever. For at this function, the ladies were regaled with perfumes rather than alcoholic beverages. And the outstanding feature of the party was the introduction of a new and beautiful "perfume."

This perfume, which would delight the heart of any woman who likes nice things, is a perfect perfume and stocked with attractive fragrances of perfume in every conceivable size and shape.

There are cards with the different perfumes and their combinations listed, just like the regular perfume. And there are also tiny receptacles, like miniature cocktail shakers for perfumes to be mixed in.

That idea of mixing "perfumes" isn't really a new one. Even way back in the 18th century, King Louis XV and his wife, Madame de Pompadour, were famous for their perfumes that he mixed to suit his mood. But in those days, perfume was a carefully studied art, and women were very devoted to it.

Some of the most famous perfumes of today are those of the 18th century. They are still popular, and they are still being made. They are still being made, and they are still being made.

One thing that every woman should avoid doing, whether she mixes her own perfumes or not, is to use too much. It is better to use a little and have it last, than to use a lot and have it last.

There is a certain hardness and lack of good taste about the use of too much perfume. It is a sign of a woman who is not really a woman, but a woman who is not really a woman.

Some of the most famous perfumes of today are those of the 18th century. They are still popular, and they are still being made. They are still being made, and they are still being made.

One thing that every woman should avoid doing, whether she mixes her own perfumes or not, is to use too much. It is better to use a little and have it last, than to use a lot and have it last.

There is a certain hardness and lack of good taste about the use of too much perfume. It is a sign of a woman who is not really a woman, but a woman who is not really a woman.

Variety In Bread Is Aid To Meal Planner

By MARY E. DAGUE

Bread and butter is such an everyday item in meals that the thoughtless inclusion of it has become a habit. In this day of lean budgets, however, it is well to consider the possibilities of variety in bread.

For instance, instead of the usual white loaf, one can use a whole wheat loaf, or a loaf made with a mixture of white and whole wheat flour.

Another variety is to use a different kind of yeast. For instance, one can use a fast-rising yeast, or a slow-rising yeast.

One can also use a different kind of sugar. For instance, one can use a brown sugar, or a molasses.

Another variety is to use a different kind of fat. For instance, one can use a butter, or a lard.

One can also use a different kind of salt. For instance, one can use a coarse salt, or a fine salt.

Another variety is to use a different kind of flavoring. For instance, one can use a vanilla, or a cinnamon.

One can also use a different kind of shape. For instance, one can use a round loaf, or a square loaf.

Another variety is to use a different kind of texture. For instance, one can use a soft loaf, or a crisp loaf.

One can also use a different kind of color. For instance, one can use a white loaf, or a brown loaf.

Another variety is to use a different kind of size. For instance, one can use a large loaf, or a small loaf.

One can also use a different kind of price. For instance, one can use a cheap loaf, or an expensive loaf.

Another variety is to use a different kind of quality. For instance, one can use a good loaf, or a bad loaf.

One can also use a different kind of quantity. For instance, one can use a large quantity, or a small quantity.

Another variety is to use a different kind of location. For instance, one can use a loaf from a bakery, or a loaf from a grocery store.

One can also use a different kind of time. For instance, one can use a loaf that is fresh, or a loaf that is stale.

Another variety is to use a different kind of season. For instance, one can use a loaf that is in season, or a loaf that is out of season.

One can also use a different kind of weather. For instance, one can use a loaf that is in good weather, or a loaf that is in bad weather.

Another variety is to use a different kind of mood. For instance, one can use a loaf that is in a good mood, or a loaf that is in a bad mood.

One can also use a different kind of feeling. For instance, one can use a loaf that is in a good feeling, or a loaf that is in a bad feeling.

Minute Make-Ups

"I'm in for it now," said Miss Blunt to Mr. Blunt, the principal. "What have you done?" he asked.

"Well, I simply couldn't stand it any longer," she said. "I decided to clean up."

"If you mean that you have cleaned up your room, that is all right," he said. "But if you mean that you have cleaned up your face, that is another matter."

"I mean that I have cleaned up my face," she said. "I have used a little make-up."

Enlarged Painting Appropriation Also Gets Preliminary Sanction

Edmonton Public School Board property committee Tuesday night gave preliminary sanction to a $25,000 appropriation for painting and enlarging of city schools. The committee also gave preliminary sanction to a $2,000 bonus to the budget for maintenance and improvements.

The committee's recommendation, to be referred to the board, called for an estimate of $47,000 for maintenance and improvement of buildings for an estimate of the $45,000 budgeted in 1935.

COULDN'T STAND IT
A provisional estimate of $40,000 for this work was submitted by H. Stary, building commissioner, but the committee felt that Stary could not stand the expense, although it was admitted building needed work done on them.

Planning to present it possible three gymnasium buildings for high school physical education, the committee instructed Mr. Stary to prepare plans and specifications for the gymnasium buildings. When these plans are approved the building commissioner will be authorized to call for tenders for one two and three of the buildings. This $30,000 was spent for these services.

Request of Victoria High School for enlargement to the assembly hall stage was referred to the building commissioner.

PROVISIONAL ESTIMATE
Provisional estimate of $37,500 for cleaning, fuel, light, and heat was passed by the committee. In 1935 $38,400 was spent for these services.

FARMERS ASK CONTINUANCE OF DEBT LAWS

Fear Efforts Might be Made to Seek Lessening of Protection

Strong fears that organized efforts might be made to bring pressure upon both the Alberta and Dominion governments to lessen protection afforded agriculturists by debt adjustment legislation, were expressed at the annual Chilled Farmer of Alberta convention on Tuesday, created a session among delegates and produced a lively, provocative discussion that came under great heat on occasions.

The discussion, which was eventually adjourned without decision, arose over a resolution that the present debt adjustment legislation be continued to protect urban and rural dwellers and that organized farmers be given representation on the debt adjustment board.

VEILED THREATS
It was charged by opponents of the resolution that it contained veiled threats against the farmer and it was urged that force should not be used.

On the other hand, supporters of the resolution declared it called only for defense organization to obtain legal protection to maintain their rights.

The convention decided to petition the Dominion government to continue the legislation and to force to the end that all the burden of debt relief shall not be borne by agriculture.

FEARS EXPRESSED
Four speakers expressed the fear that the farm people of Alberta would be faced with eviction and foreclosures from their homes if debt protection is abandoned by senior governments. However the motion calling upon farm people to organize to protect themselves against eviction was tabled.

Prior to tabling the debate, the speaker and only laying it on the table brought an armistice to the opposing factions.

It is expected that when the assurance of continued protection is tabled and is voted upon, the convention will be closed.

CAMPBELL GOING ON
Dealing with the move to get debt legislation removed, Henry Campbell, president of the convention, declared that "we know there is a campaign going on in the Dominion to get this legislation removed. If this happens, what then? We would be left to our own resources and we should be ready to co-operate with other farmers."

RESOLUTION DANGEROUS
Rufus Bates, of Egan, branded the resolution as dangerous and should not be passed. He contended that the U.F.A. executive was doing nothing to get out of the situation. Another delegate declared it would be "criminal" if passed.

This was finally sent back for redrafting.

COMPELLED TO SEEK AID
It was pointed out that many farmers throughout the province, through no fault of their own, but because of excessive crop failures, have been compelled to seek relief in the form of debt adjustment.

These farmers, it was pointed out, have been compelled to get security loans, to get out of the situation, and today are being harassed by accounts and notices requiring payment and notification that interest is now being added.
